NEW SHORT STORIES

An Awkward Moment.
The late Samuel L. Jones, the "Golden Rule mayor" of Toledo, was once discussing, in a popular moment, "The most awkward of," he said, smilingly, "the experience of a world minister of Columbia." The minister (described than once, and I am sure it must have been very awkward. "It seems that I dined with a brother country and after

"TAKE THAT," SHE SAID.
The garden with his host till rather late. The host finally asked him to stay all night, and he consented. "They went back to the house together to arrange about the spare chamber and so on, and afterward they took another turn about the garden. "Well," said the host at last, "suppose we turn in. Younder is the hall-way. Just go in there and hang up your hat and wait for me. I want to speak to the gardener, and I'll join you in a moment." "So the guest, alone, entered the hall. He groped his way, for it was very dark. By the door stood the wife of the host. She mistook him for her husband in the gloom, and, taking up a large Bible from the table, she brought it down across his shoulders with a whack. "There," she said, "take that for asking that ugly wretch to stay all night!"

Senator Davis' Grandsons.
Speaking of the Elkins boys recalls the fact that when they were little fellows and Mr. Elkins was conducting General Harrison's campaign for the presidency they astonished their father one night by marching past his house at the head of a juvenile torch-light procession, with banners and transparencies bearing the portrait of the opposing candidate. "Why, what's this?" exclaimed Senator Elkins in a tone of amazement. "Is it possible that you boys don't know what General Harrison looks like?" "That's not Harrison's picture," answered one of the youngsters, with malicious delight. "This is the Grover Cleveland Junior Campaign club, and that's the portrait of our peerless leader."

The Bishop's View.
An English clergyman, the Rev. Mr. Fillingham, who has been making spectacular and physically forcible objections in New York to Bishop Potter's high church methods of worship, heard that the new step had been to the circus and had highly, says the New York Times, "not surprised."

Dogma Defined.
The late Miss Rose Delmonico, the owner of the famous New York restaurant, was all her life fond of children. Children knew Miss Delmonico as Aunt Rosa, and she was delighted to visit her, says the New York Times. One day the good old lady was giving a little girl some etymological instructions. The word "dogma" came up, and Miss Delmonico defined it, and then bade her pupil to use it in a sentence. The pupil, after a little hard thought, composed around the word "dogma" the sentence that follows: "The dogma had little puppies."

The Gray Horse's Idea.
The late Maurice Barrymore one day accosted a Bloomingdale patient who was exercising with a wheelbarrow on the lawn, says the New York Times. "Why do you have your wheelbarrow turned upside down?" asked the actor. "Because I am crazy," replied the patient. "If I turned it up the other way they might fill it with bricks."

WASHINGTON LETTER

[Special Correspondence.]
While Washington is by common consent the best laid out city in the United States, already containing in parks, grounds adjoining public buildings and triangular spaces at the intersection of diagonal streets some $5,000 acres, a comprehensive scheme of public improvement has been recommended by a commission of expert landscape gardeners, which includes two important features. The first is the opening of a mall nearly 900 feet in width from the capitol to the Washington monument, this to be divided by rows of trees and interspersed with fountains, monuments and other ornamental features. The second is that of a circular connected system of outlying parks, which will include within its range the entire system of fortifications erected for the defense of Washington during the civil war, thus giving the city a connected system of parkways covering about $8,000 acres and joined by attractive driveways.

The Treasury Tables.
Secretary Shaw is worried about the score or more cats which make their home in the treasury building. These cats drag out a miserable existence in the gloomy hallways and vaults of the structure and as a consequence are not particularly healthy looking. Secretary Shaw meets one of them occasionally in the corridors of the building, and they have aroused his pity to the point that he is considering the possibility of establishing an official sand pile in the sunlight for the exclusive use of the tabbies.

Cannot Learn From Japan.
According to one of the highest officers of the commissary department of the army, no special efforts are being made by this government to observe the commissary methods of the Japanese in the far east. He says the conditions that obtain in the Japanese army and that of this country are so different that such observations are of little value. The United States could never hope to reduce the commissary problems to the simplicity those problems hold for the Japanese, because army officers despair of ever getting an emergency ration that the American troops, short of the point of being nearly starved, will eat.

Investigating Alaskan Courts.
Judge William A. Day, assistant attorney general, who went to Alaska for the department of justice a number of weeks ago, is still there, and, according to reports that have reached the department, he is subjecting the whole of the machinery of federal justice in the territory to a most searching scrutiny. He is investigating at close range all the numerous complaints against officials in Alaska who are under the supervision of the department of justice and is traveling thousands of miles under many hardships to accomplish the work assigned to him. He will not be back for a number of weeks and is expected to have a report that will result in some important reforms in the ways of administering justice in the territory.

Maps For Army Maneuvers.
Army engineers have been busy for weeks surveying and mapping the region of the maneuvers to be held in September near Manassas, Va. They have prepared topographic maps of parts of two counties that reveal the nature of the country in the greatest detail. Woods, streams, roads, hills and valleys are all clearly shown. The maps are remarkable for their thoroughness, and an army officer remarked on seeing them that if the commanders of the contending armies in the sixties had been able to obtain such maps they would have been invaluable.

Cold Storage Food.
Latest on the rolls of those willing to sacrifice themselves to the cause of science and truth are twelve clerks of the bureau of chemistry of the department of agriculture, who have offered themselves up to be fed for nine months on cold storage foods. The tests will be conducted under the supervision of Dr. H. W. Wiley, chief chemist of the department, who in recent months has conducted a number of notable experiments to determine what is fit to eat and what is not.

The City Beautiful.
The sum total of the trees that serve to render Washington the city beautiful is estimated at $8,000. An approximate estimate has also been made of the number of streets the roads of which are completely arched by the overhanging branches of the trees along the curb lines. This is thirty miles—thirty miles, that is, of paved streets—along which one can drive and be protected from the heat of a summer sun.

Wanted a Dog.
Two months ago a little girl from Chicago wrote to the Washington health officer requesting that a dog be sent her. She explained that she understood dogs were sent to a pound here and were given away when not called for by the owners. Dr. Woodward wrote back informing her that, while the office would not ship one to Chicago, if she would come to Washington he would be glad to furnish her with a dog. To his surprise, the other day he received a letter from the little girl telling him she was soon to be in Washington and expressing the hope that he would have the dog ready for her.

The President's Plans.
According to present plans, President Roosevelt, with his entire family, will return to the White House for the winter on Sept. 20. The president will not then again leave Washington until election day, when he will go home to vote.

Groundless Fear.
Cholly—I did think of going in for politics, but I was afraid I wouldn't know just how to treat my infewlahs, don't y' know. Peppery—Your inferiors! Oh, you wouldn't be likely to meet any of them.—Philadelphia Press.

THE FIRST CAMPAIGN LIE

A Sonoma correspondent of the San Francisco Chronicle sent a communication to that paper saying that many Sonoma Republicans contributed toward the expense of the Bell meeting held in Sonoma, last Saturday evening.

We consulted J. B. Small, the Democratic committeeman here, and his list of those who contributed to wards the expense of the meeting.

Not one Republican's name was on the list. There was one place on the list signed CASH, $1. The amount was given by a Bell man who is sometimes accused of being a Republican.

The truth of the matter is, many broadminded Republicans attended the meeting and were deeply interested, many became converted and do not to openly declare themselves for Mr. Theodore A. Bell for congress. This in fact is the way that the Republicans contributed to the success of the meeting.

We are sorry to note that the Santa Rosa Republican got hold of and published the falsehood, evidently believing it to be a fact.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Something for you to think about

The time is surely coming when you will have to use Elaterite and Mastic roofing on your house, barn, storehouse, winery, drier, hophouse for the sake of economy and permanent protection from leaks, so you may as well think about it now and ask your home agent for samples, price list and full information, or write to Sam Meyer, Healdsburg, distributor for Sonoma, Lake and Mendocino counties. It is infinitely better than any other roofing. It is made of mineral rubber, does not wear out, never requires repairing or painting, remaining intact as long as the building stands, is fire-proof and costs no more than any other roofing. Anybody can lay it by following the simple directions.

AN INTERESTING LETTER

Napa, Aug. 26, 1904.
F. I. Vassault, Sec'y and etc.
My dear Sir:

Yours of yesterday in reference to the improvement of the channel of Sonoma Creek, is at hand, and in reply I beg leave to state that I shall be only too glad to render all possible assistance in procuring a sufficient appropriation to restore the creek to its former navigable condition. At the last session of congress, Mr. Burton, chairman of the River and Harbor committee, announced that the River and Harbor bill would be brought in next winter. I will see that a provision is inserted in this bill for a preliminary examination of Sonoma Creek. As I understand it, it will be impossible to get any appropriation without the usual preliminary examination so that we shall be compelled to wait until another River and Harbor bill is reported to obtain the necessary moneys for the work.

If the engineers report favorably upon their examinations of the stream, the War Department will at once direct an estimate of cost to be made and this estimate will be used in determining the amount of appropriation. Should the engineers report unfavorably no estimate of cost can be made without further action of Congress.

You will therefore see the urgent necessity of securing a favorable report upon the preliminary examination. My relations with Col. Heuer, who is in charge of the River and Harbor work in this State, are very friendly, and, after congress orders an examination I will make it a point to go over the creek with Col. Heuer and of course we should be accompanied by your committee in order that all facts bearing on the commercial value of the waterway may be presented.

It will be some aid to me to go carefully over the channel and I shall probably have an opportunity to do so within the next three or four weeks. I shall notify you later of the exact date when I can make this visit.

Assuring you of my earnest desire to render you all such aid as I can in your proposed improvement, I beg to remain

Yours Very Truly
THEODORE A. BELL.

The Kind You Have Always Bought

RUINED BY A RASH WAGER.

A rash wager has ruined many a man financially, but this man was ruined by a rash wager. He was proud of his strength and waded that he could lift a ship's anchor. He won the wager, but the strain was too great for him and he broke down in health from that day.

There's many a man or woman who undertakes too great a task for the strength they possess. They won't give up, so they break down. The woman drudges in the house, the man toils in the store. They don't break down by one tremendous strain, but by a steady over-draft on their strength.

People who are run-down in health, deficient in vitality, worn-out or worked out, will find new life and strength in the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, and so enables nourishment of the body. It purifies and enriches the blood, and builds up the body with sound muscle and solid flesh.

"When I commenced your medicine my health was completely broken down," writes Mrs. Minnie Lammann, of Porcupine, Wis. "At times, generally after eating, was taken with terrible distress in stomach. Words fail to express what I suffered. My right arm was almost helpless—liver very much affected, and my nerves were so bad I was almost in hysterics, but all to no avail, for I was no better. I felt dreadfully discouraged, but thought I would try once more to find relief. I began to use Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery and 'Favorite Prescription.' I gradually began to improve each day, and grew strong all over."

Accept no substitute for "Golden Medical Discovery." There is nothing "just as good" for diseases of the stomach and blood.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cleanse the bowels and stimulate the sluggish liver.

Prominent Man Is Coming

Big Meeting in Union Hall in the Evening

A Member of the River and Harbor Committee Will View

Sonoma Creek
Sept. 26

Hon. James McLachlan, representative in Congress from the Los Angeles district, a member of the great River and Harbor Committee, will be here on Sept. 26 with the Hon. D. E. McKinley, Assistant U. S. District Attorney and Republican candidate for Congress in this second district. The gentlemen will meet with our people and view the creek during the day and will hold a grand Republican rally in Union Hall in the evening.

Both gentlemen are unusually good speakers and a great meeting is promised.

With all the willingness on the part of candidates for congress favoring Sonoma, all the people of this valley need to do, it seems, is to hang together and ask a definite thing.

Come out and hear what these noted speakers have to say on Monday, Sept. 26

China vs. Japan

China as represented by Ah Gee, declared War upon Japan as represented by Morimoto, at Agua Caliente, on Wednesday morning last. Constable Ryan was called but Ah Gee had transferred himself to Sonoma where Marshal Albertson's eagle eye caught sight of him. He was apprehended and the case was brought before a board of arbitration consisting of Justice of the Peace Small.

Ah Gee confessed to having been guilty of cutting a deep gash on the Jap's cranium with a large iron spoon.

The alternative of $20 or 20 days at Hotel de Grace was given and the 20 days was chosen.

Deputy Sheriff Ryan accompanied Ah Gee to the county seat Wednesday evening.

Trustees G. H. Hotz, J. E. Poppe, George Breitenbach, A. Pinelli, R. McDonnell Vote Unanimously to Accept Them

All members were present at a meeting of the City Trustees; Wednesday evening and President Poppe presided. The following bills were passed for payment:—J. Albertson, salary, $15; Robert Poppe, salary 25; H. Munfrey, repairs, $4.75; Preston R. Davis, repairing hydrants, $90; L. Breitenbach, street sprinkling, $93.97; H. Granice, ad., $10.07. A communication was received from C. T. Ryland offering to light the city with 25 thirty-two candle power lamps at $35 per month for one year. A motion to enter into a contract with Mr. Ryland for that sum and time was objected to by Trustee Breitenbach on the ground that the sum involved exceeded $100. The objection was sustained. A motion made by Trustee McDonnell, seconded by Trustee Hotz, to enter into a contract for 1 month, was passed by the following vote, "Yes," Poppe, Pinelli, Hotz, and McDonnell; "No," Breitenbach.

The City Marshal was ordered to cite G. Mazza to appear before the board on Monday evening, Sept. 12, to show cause why his saloon license should not be revoked.

The $50 premium given to the architect whose plans were accepted was kindly returned to the city by Mr. Lutgens, that is the $50 will be considered as part payment of his share of the contract price of the building. The cut of the building, (the only one in existence,) which appeared in the EXPOSITOR some weeks ago again appears above.

All the latest and most modern plumbing, building materials, etc., will be used in its construction.

As soon as the necessary preliminaries will have been finished and bids advertised for, work will commence without further delay.

The handsome stone structure will be an ornament to Sonoma and mark a new step in the march of progress which the EXPOSITOR has always advocated.

The most closely contested entry was the pole vault in which Coots of Kenwood beat MacQuiddy by one inch. The 50 yd. dash was won by Boveniser of Kenwood. Death of Mrs. Caroline White

Passed Away at the Home of Her Daughter on Broadway Sunday

Our community was sadly shocked last Monday morning upon learning of the sudden death from heart failure of Mrs. Elizabeth Caroline White at the home of her daughter, Mrs. S. B. Lewis.

But a short hour previous to her demise she had chatted pleasantly with those about the house.

Deceased was a pioneer lady of Sonoma Valley and was greatly beloved by a wide circle of friends. She came to this valley in 1862 having been married in February of that year to her surviving husband C. S. White.

The family have lived at Kenwood for the past three years. Deceased was a lady of fine Christian character, and had been a member of the M. E. Church South, for over thirty years.

Her father, Reuben Box, who passed away some years ago, was the first assessor of Sonoma County and it was through his efforts that the first public school in the county was started in what is now Dunbar District. This school Mrs. White, then Miss Box, attended.

Mrs. Joel Zane, Mrs. Jane Gutliere, of Tulare Co., Mrs. Fannie Johnson, of Kenwood, are sisters and Samuel Box a brother of deceased. She leaves besides her husband, six children, Mrs. S. B. Lewis, Mrs. Bainbridge of San Rafael, Misses Lucy and Allie White, and Messrs. Willie and Frank White, to mourn the loss of a devoted wife and mother.

She will be greatly missed by a host of friends, and deeply mourned by those to whom she was near and dear.

The funeral was conducted from the residence of her daughter, Mrs. S. B. Lewis on Broadway, at 2 o'clock Wednesday afternoon, and was largely attended. Rev. W. A. Finley of Santa Rosa officiated.

The remains were laid to rest beside those of her father and mother in the Valley Cemetery.

The Republican Rally

A large and enthusiastic crowd greeted the gifted statesman Hon. Theodore A. Bell, candidate for congress on the Democratic ticket, in Union Hall last Saturday night.

On the platform with the speaker of the evening were: Blair Hart, our present Supervisor and candidate for reelection and Clarence F. Lea, Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee.

Anvils roared, the band played and enthusiasm ran high for the popular candidate for Congress.

F. T. Duhring acted as chairman of the evening opening the meeting with a few appropriate remarks, after which he introduced Clarence F. Lea, Chairman of the Democratic County Central Committee, who made an eloquent appeal and gave a brief sketch of the character of Hon. Theodore Bell.

Mr. Bell made a plain earnest common sense talk and was listened to with intense interest.

He strengthened the Democrats in his belief and made many notable converts to his support from among the Republicans.

A social dance was enjoyed after the meeting.

Sunday's Base Ball Game

Last Sunday's game between the home team and the North Stars of San Francisco was a good one, well attended, and as prognosticated by the EXPOSITOR, a retriever.

The boys from Frisco played well and did their best but were no match for the Judge's colts, who did them up handsly with a score of 9 to 5. Batteries: Good Brand and MacQuiddy; Gill and Ryan.

"Bill" Becker, Sonoma's favorite umpire, was on deck.

On next Sunday afternoon the H. B. Bourbons of S. F. will cross bats here with the Sonoma boys and a hot game is promised.

The Siege of Laurel Hall

By Elmore Elliott Peake

A PARTY of four, two men and two women, stood on a wind swept, hammock hung piazza of the Cotton club. On the right rolled the broad Atlantic, on the left lay the narrow channel which separates Turtle Island from the Georgia mainland. The party had evidently just emerged from the clubhouse, and for a moment they halted in a rather awkward silence, the young women pretending to look at the ocean, the young men pretending to look at nothing, but in fact looking very closely at the young women. Then by tacit consent they all descended the long flight of steps, paired off at the bottom and strolled down the gravelled walk to a pier on the channel side. Here they embarked in a rowboat and crossed to the mainland, just below the club stables.

They climbed the short, steep ascent and were met at the stable door by a negro leading two horses, brown and black, fitted with side saddles. The man politely took charge of the horses, but before the company could get into the stables, a young woman could do so, she herself ostentatiously held out her hand for the bride of her momentary powerful black fellow with gloved hand and flashing eyes, for whose heels the dark leader had a most lively respect.

Between the woman and horse there seemed a kind of affinity. Indeed one would have picked just such a horse for such a woman. Her well braced shoulders, sloping back and firmly lifted bosom suggested an intense vitality and a never failing flow of spirits. Her brown eyes had a way of leveling themselves upon an object which must sometimes have been disconcerting to the object. Her wavy brown hair hung as closely to her shapely head as if it had been molded there. Yet any impression of mannishness which one might have got from these physical attributes would have been instantly effaced by the soft droop of her mouth or by a closer look into those same level eyes, in whose depths there lay a wonderful tenderness.

The man opposite her, a man of thirty perhaps, and dark, must have had such a closer look, or else was a man of valor, for he seemed not at all dismayed by the rather haughty front which the young woman presented to him as they stood a little apart from the other couple. His face was sober enough, but flitting about in his shrewd dark eyes was something suspiciously like a wink.

"Don't you think one of us had better ride home with you and Clara, Miss Elphinstone?" he asked suavely.

"That doesn't necessarily mean me, you know," he added, with perhaps just a breath of humor.

"I don't think we need trouble either of you, Mr. Middleton," she answered, pronouncing his name distinctly.

"It wouldn't be much trouble," he returned insouciantly, still stroking Mahomet's nose. But this was too much, delicate as it was.

"Mr. Middleton," she exclaimed haughtily, "for a gentleman I think you can make the most ungentlemanly insinuations of any man in my circle of acquaintances."

"I am sorry you have such a poor opinion of me," answered Middleton gravely, "the more so as I have the greatest respect for your judgment." Had there been the tiniest streak of irony in this last there must have been trouble, but his sincerity was unimpeachable. Miss Elphinstone made no answer—there seemed none to make—and he continued, "I suggested riding home with you because I know that your father dislikes to have you running around the country alone since he sentenced those smugglers."

"My father will appreciate your kindness, I am sure," said Miss Elphinstone, not quite so cavalierly.

The other couple, who seemed to be getting on most amicably some twenty feet distant, were not unconscious of the crossfire between Miss Elphinstone and her companion, and it seemed to afford them considerable amusement.

But as the two young women cantered along the sandy road a few minutes later Miss Gaylord's amusement took on a sympathetic hue as she furtively watched her moody companion.

"Clara," burst out Miss Elphinstone at last, "I think Dan Middleton has less discretion for a man of his breeding than any one in the world, and it's going to make the woman who marries him unhappy for life. The way he hung around that odious Mrs. Tanner today, and in my presence, was positively disgraceful. Everybody noticed it, and everybody was looking at me as though they pitied me. Yet when I took the gentleman to task for it he was perfectly amazed. But my eyes are being opened. Dan Middleton likes a woman simply because she is a woman. All women are alike to him, all equally deserving of his respect. He makes no distinction; he is incapable of a distinction. Do you know what that means, Clara?" she suddenly asked in a trembling voice, pausing and turning a troubled face to her friend. "It means that Dan Middleton is as fickle as a flirt!"

"Oh, May, Dan is not fickle!" exclaimed Clara reproachfully.

For answer Miss Elphinstone burst into tears, but she proudly turned her quivering lips away and for diversion touched Mahomet's flank with her whip.

After a short half hour's ride the two equestriennes came in sight of Laurel Hall, the ancestral home of the Elphinstones, a stately old manor house delightfully situated on a point of land formed by an estuary of the ocean and half buried in a grove of laurels and live oaks. The girls' first view of the house was across this estuary, the head of which, in the absence of a bridge, had to be rounded by a further ride of half a mile. But the stables soon came in sight, and throwing their reins to a couple of waiting negro boys, the two girls dismounted and set off for the house.

General Elphinstone—Judge Elphinstone he was called since his elevation to the bench—met the young women at the steps of the porch, put an arm around each of them, and kissed them in courtly fashion. If there were any misty traces left in May's eyes the cavalier failed to discover them as he rallied her and Clara on the pleasures of the day at the Cotton club.

"Dan and Jeff are looking after their horses, I suppose," he ran on, still retaining the pretty pair in his arms. "They didn't come, papa," answered May, stealing an odd glance at Clara and blushing a little.

"Didn't come?" exclaimed the general in surprise. "I thought that was the plan." He patted the dusky lashes at him in what was undeniably a wink, exquisite and ladylike though it was. Then his arms perceptibly tightened around the two yielding forms, and he drew them both closely as he continued, with tender gravity: "I wish my little girls were all married, and I could have them all alone until this ugly business of the smugglers blows over. I don't really think there is any danger, but you are too precious to be put even to the slightest hazard," he added in lighter vein and smiled.

The young women slept together in a large upper chamber, and it was late before the murmur of their voices was heard. May had scarcely closed her eyes when she was awakened by a sound which she at once recognized as the creaking of a door in her confused state seemed to come from all quarters. Her first thought was of the clubhouse, the visitation of which five years before she remembered vividly, and she was on her feet in an instant, with a fluttering heart. The noise quickly repeated itself, and now wide awake, she recognized it as a hurried rapping on her door. Fearlessly throwing the door open, she made out in the gloom the half dressed figure of old Penelope, the cook.

"Lawdy, missy!" exclaimed the frightened negress, staggering into the room and clapping the airily clad figure of her young mistress to her bosom. "Dey's men outside—and dey's got guns—and I know dey's smugglers—and dey gwine bu'n the house and kill yo' paw, lak dey kill Judge Bud!"

At this reference to Judge Bud's fate at the hands of a lawless mob May felt a chilling cold over her heart, and for a moment she leaned heavily upon the old mammy; then, all in an instant and to her own surprise, she found herself perfectly calm. Freeing herself from Penelope's desperate grasp, she walked over to a window and looked out. The gloom outside was rendered doubly deep by the tropical abundance of foliage about the house, and at first she could see nothing. But when her eyes had adjusted themselves she made out a dark, sentinel-like figure against the lilac blooms, fifty feet or more away. While she looked this figure was stealthily joined by another one, and then the two faded out of sight.

Without waking Clara, May hastily pulled on her shoes and stockings, slipped on her nightgown, and for a moment she leaned heavily upon the old mammy; then, all in an instant and to her own surprise, she found herself perfectly calm. The man who had lived through Spotsylvania was not to be frightened by a prowling gang of outlaws even though their game was his blood, and the general bore himself, in spite of his negligence, with his usual dignity.

A hasty survey of the grounds from different windows convinced him that the house was surrounded though by how large a force he could not conjecture, for the marauders were evidently aware that they had been discovered and kept well back in the shadows, motionless and silent.

"I am more afraid of the cowardly scoundrels burning the stables than anything else," said the general anxiously to May as they met in the main entrance hall and she was pale, but composed, and her glistening eyes and tumbled hair gave her a very warlike appearance indeed. "Wake Clara up," continued her father, "and send all the servants here as quickly as you can. Allow no lamps to be lit and no noise to be made."

In a very short time a group of shivering, wild eyed blacks of both sexes and all ages and representing almost every state of dress and undress was gathered in the great main hall. May and Clara Gaylord were among them.

General Elphinstone, cool and determined, faced the motley aggregation as a captain might face his company. A southern plantation home of the old type was, with its sport loving inmates, more likely than not to be a small arsenal, and Laurel Hall was no exception.

The young fellows got a terrible weapon at close range when loaded with buckshot, fell mostly to the women. May and Clara each received a heavy pistol.

Her father's words about the burning of the stables gave May more uneasiness as she stood at her post at a dining room window than any personal danger. The thought of their beautiful horses cruelly perishing by fire, above all her beloved Mahomet, was intolerable. Yet there seemed only one way to avert such a catastrophe, and a very dangerous way—at that—namely, to steal through the garden and summon the police.

Once in the fear less girl's mind, it gave her no rest, and in less than five minutes she decided to put the plan into execution. To this end she turned from the window and made her way through the darkness to the couch where Penelope lay in a state of bordering on prostration.

"Mammy, I can't stand this any longer," May began in a caged and see those horses burned.

"I am going to ride to the Cotton club," cyarn let you go!" moaned Penelope, pulling the girl down and kissing her. "Sumplin' dreadful 'll happen. An' yo' paw 'll never let you go—never on the face of the yeth."

"Papa mustn't know it till after I'm gone," answered May firmly. "Remember that. When I've been gone fifteen minutes you can tell him. And tell him to be careful not to shoot any of us, for we'll have to stay outside to guard the stables."

Tearing herself almost by main force from the helpless, sobbing old negress, May felt her way to a wardrobe for a waterproof, the better to render herself invisible in the darkness. To protect her head she seized the first thing which offered—one of her father's old slouch hats—which she drew down tightly over her hair. The kitchen door, opening into the grape arbor beyond, which was now as black as a tunnel, offered the best avenue of escape provided the outlaws had not placed a sentinel somewhere in the arbor. May took that chance. The thought of suddenly bumping into a man there in the cimmerian darkness was most unenvying to her—indeed, sickening—but she did not flinch, and holding her pistol in one hand and her skirts in the other so that they might not rustle, she made her way noiselessly along.

RELIC FROM THE STONE AGE

A Body From the Prehistoric Burying Places of England.

In Somersetshire, England, may be seen many "barrows," burying places of prehistoric man. Long ages ago, when the elephant and rhinoceros, the lion and bear, the hyena and wolf, the great elk and the reindeer were among the common animals of England, primitive man and savage beasts lived in caves in this region.

At the entrance to these caves the aborigines, clad in skins, kept fires burning for warmth and for protection from the wild beasts. It was here that they made flint hatchets, knives and arrowheads. Not long ago a trench was being dug within the mouth of one of these caves for the purpose of draining.

It was found necessary to break up a stalagmite floor of two thick layers. Between the layers was a deposit of cave earth and stones, in which was discovered the skeleton of a man of very great antiquity in an excellent state of preservation. With it were found several flint knives and flakes. Experts who made a careful examination of the skull, which has projecting brows and receding frontal bone, have decided that it belongs to the stone age and is of a type intermediate between the paleolithic and neolithic ages.

Apparently the body had been placed in a small passage leading off from the great passage to the stalagmite cave, and had been prevented from disturbance by stones piled around it. The stalagmite floor had formed over it all, effectually preserving it to the present day.—Harper's Weekly.

ANIMALS IN BATTLE.

The Gorilla's Powerful Arms Make It a Formidable Foe.

Fish fighting is a most popular sport in Siam. The two fish, trained from the age of six months to fight, are placed in a large glass bottle. It is most curious to note each fish's attitude when it becomes aware of its adversary's presence in the bottle. Swelling with rage and pride, they sail around and around the narrow space, pretending not to notice each other until suddenly one fish makes a savage dart at its unwelcome companion, hitting its fins and body. The fight continues until the referee sees that the issue is no longer in doubt, when the contest is stopped.

Horses use either their teeth or their hoofs as a mode of defense. A curious instance of the effectiveness of these weapons once occurred at Sheffield park. A bullock, barking and snarling, chased a horse turned loose around and around a meadow, not with angry intent, but purely from excess of high spirits. After galloping around the field several times the horse stopped dead, and turning sharply around, lashed out at the yelling dog, with a fatal result, for its skull was cloven.

The gorilla is a most formidable opponent in battle, its great strength lying in its powerful arms. Few animals of the forest have the slightest chance of overcoming a gorilla. A python has been known to encircle its coils around the gorilla's body, only, however, to have its own body torn open by its adversary's hands.

What They Didn't Know About Air. Health journals have been in existence time out of mind. One in particular in its day was widely accepted as an authority on all matters of hygiene. An item which appeared in this paper in 1874 says among other things that "it is safer to sleep in a bad air all night—that is, with the windows tightly closed—with a temperature over 50 than in a pure air with a temperature under 40."

Appearance a Protection. "Appearances are deceitful" is an old saying, which was illustrated by an old lady in one of our banks a few days ago.

She drew out a sum very near the $1,000 mark. The banker kindly asked her if she did not wish an escort to her destination in order to insure protection for the large amount. Looking calmly at the banker, she replied, "Why, nobody would think I had more than $1.25!"—Rumford Falls Times.

Basis of His Esteem. "It is proper to respect an office under the government," said the patriotic citizen, "even if you do not happen to approve of the man who holds it."

"Of course," answered Senator Sorghum. "It is to the office that the salary and perquisites are attached, not to the individual."—Washington Star.

A Lifetime's Eating. Science Siftings tells us that if we could see the amount of food one would consume in a lifetime pass before us the sight would be quite appalling. If a man lived seventy years, he would consume during that time about 100 four pound loaves of bread a year, or a total of 7,000 substantial loaves. Of meat he would consume, if he ate all beef, forty bullocks; of potatoes, an average of 200 pounds per year. If he ate only two eggs a week, it would require about 7,000 eggs to feed him during his lifetime; of tea and coffee only an average a pint a day, or for a lifetime about 1,220 gallons.

Profitable. "Did you feel cheap when you found out that the count your daughter wanted to marry was an impostor?"

"Cheap? I should say not! It was a half million clear profit to me."—Chicago Exchange.

He Gave It Up. Mrs. Henpeck—I've often wondered what first attracted you to me. What was it about me that made you want to marry me? Henpeck—I give up. I never was good at riddles.—Chicago Journal.
